Moodle: View site as a student

Last Modified on 08/11/2022 10:27 am EDT

If at any time you wish to see the course the way a student or other participant sees it, you have the option to switch your role.

Before you start, you may need access to the following:

- a teacher role in a Bryn Mawr Moodle course (i.e., Instructor of record, Other editing teacher, Non-editing teacher)

1. Click on your name in the upper right-hand corner of Moodle. You should see an option at the bottom of the drop-down menu that says "Switch role to...". Click this to see a list of roles that you may select (see this post on Moodle: Enroll or unenroll participants for a list of roles and their meanings in Moodle). Please note that this only works inside a course page and is not available on the Dashboard.
2. Once you select a different role, you may view your course this way, but it won't let you participate in activities as if you were a student (e.g. take a quiz, submit an assignment, etc.).
3. When you're ready to switch back to your regular role, just click on your name again and choose "Return to my normal role".
